Web 2.0 is a new way for educators to use the Web in a collaborative, interactive fashion. Web 2.0 is all about individuals who can create content, as well as share and merge their ideas. The Web is no longer a spectator sport – it's all about people, ideas, and collaboration. This workshop will provide a hands-on introduction to some of the more popular Web 2.0 tools: Blogs, wikis, ings igoogle, google reader, sites and docs, along with social bookmarking tools, video websites and presentation tools, to name a few. Participants will spend time face to face and online designing and sharing curriculum-based activities that incorporate several Web 2.0 tools. Ample online resources will be provided. Three graduate credits optionally will be available from Fitchburg State College.

Note: MESPA is working on developing a CAGS program in Instructional Technology through Fitchburg State and these credits may be able to be applied toward that program.
